POSTPARTUM FATHERS
From one dad to another

Congrats on the baby. This page is for you.

Everybody asks about the baby and the mom, and they should. Hardly anybody asks the dad. So here's a page for you to keep on the fridge or in your phone.

Normal right now

- Running on almost no sleep
- A shorter fuse than usual
- Feeling like a spare part some days
- Missing your old life a little
- Worrying about money, your partner, everything

Worth a closer look

- Feeling numb, empty or hopeless
- Angry a lot of the time
- Drinking or escaping more than before
- Pulling away from everyone
- Can't sleep even when the baby sleeps

If the second list sounds like you for two weeks or more, tell your own doctor. It happens to a lot of new dads, and it's treatable.

Three things that help this week

1. Take turns getting one long stretch of sleep, instead of both of you waking every time.
2. Eat a real meal and get outside for ten minutes.
3. Text one friend. You don't have to talk about any of this. Just stay in touch.

A note from me:

_____

Text me anytime: _____

Free guides for new dads, in English and Spanish, and a message board where dads talk to other dads. No ads, nothing for sale, no sign-up to read.

postpartumfathers.org

Thinking about suicide, or worried you might hurt yourself or someone else? Call or text 988 any time, day or night.
National Maternal Mental Health Hotline (24/7, dads too): call or text 1-833-852-6262
If anyone is in danger right now, call 911.

Postpartum Fathers is peer support, not medical advice. It doesn't replace care from a doctor or licensed mental health professional.