POSTPARTUM FATHERS
Support. Community. Shared Strength.

Dads go through postpartum too.

About 1 in 10 new fathers become depressed during pregnancy or the first year after birth, and dads whose partners have postpartum depression are at even higher risk. It's common, it's treatable, and you don't have to figure it out alone.

- Short temper or anger
- Drinking or escaping more
- Pulling away from family
- Feeling numb or hopeless
- Working late to avoid home
- Worried about your partner

Scan for free support

Short guides for dads, how to help your partner, and a message board where fathers talk honestly. No ads, nothing for sale.

postpartumfathers.org

Worried about a dad you love? Start here:
postpartumfathers.org/worried-about-a-new-dad.html

In crisis? Call or text 988 any time. Emergency: 911.
National Maternal Mental Health Hotline (24/7, dads too): call or text 1-833-852-6262

Support and referrals, not a crisis line: Postpartum Support International HelpLine, 1-800-944-4773

Postpartum Fathers is peer support, not medical advice. It doesn't replace care from a doctor or licensed mental health professional.